Sagging tourism spurs council to OK room tax hike

■ New revenues will finance city's goal of expanding destination marketing efforts.

By PAUL WOLF

IT IS not every day that the business community asks to impose a tax on itself — or that the Carmel City Council goes along with such a plan.

But that is what happened Tuesday when the council agreed to hike the room tax rate from 10 percent to 10.5 percent to raise $142,000 annually for tourist promotion efforts.

"We've had an amazing drop in visitors, and I would just like to see us get back to the place where we were four or five years ago," said Mayor Ken White, commenting after the second of two council approvals.

Here is a closer look:

■ The council authorized a rate in-

Despite noise, bridge construction welcomed

■ New structure to be safer than original, but bulkier, less graceful.

By PAUL WOLF

THE RUSH to build a new Carmel River Bridge within 50 days may call for "some aesthetic sacrifices," according to a key state transportation official.

The new structure will be bigger and perhaps less gracefully tailored to its stunning surroundings, according to Gregg Albright, a Caltrans engineer who is serving as the principal community relations official for the project.

"The former bridge had a certain character," Albright said, referring to the 62-year-old structure that was washed away by the March 10 flood. "This one is going to be bigger — higher and wider — and it will not have that low railing."

Different look

What it will have, however, is a solid concrete rail, designed more for safety than appearance, Albright said. The low railings on the old bridge, quaint though they may have been, are not considered safe by today's construction standards, he noted.

The "shoulders" (not technically sidewalks, though often used as them) will be wider.

"It is frustrating not to have more options on aesthetics," he said. "This is going to be a plain concrete structure, and some people may be disappointed with the way it looks."

Located upstairs at the east end of the 19-room motel abutting the Carmel River on Oliver Road, Room 48 is a prime target for the earth-shaking reverberations coming from a construction site across Highway 1.

"Room 48 won't be rented for awhile," said manager Sue Adams Meixelsperger.

Workers began an around-the-clock procedure Monday to hammer 40 36-inch-round steel pilings 100 feet into the ground, which will provide support for the new $4.4 million Carmel River Bridge. All of the pilings are expected to be in the ground by Saturday.

The Fremont-based RGW Construction, Inc. began working last weekend, after the state Department of Transportation (Caltrans) accepted its bid and a promise to build the new structure by

As mayor's wife, Ann Grant 'took it all in stride'

■ City loses a woman dedicated to family and the service of others.

By JOHN DETRO

IN HER memory were the bombs that shattered Pearl Harbor, the bubbling chuckle of infants playing on her lap, steady service to family and church and community, election night excitement when the mate she adored and supported became mayor of Carmel.

And what does her local spiritual leader remember about Ann Elizabeth Grant?

"She was a wonderful, servant-type lady," said the Rev. Carl R. Hansen of All Saints' Episcopal Church. "She led when asked, but was much more comfortable as a 'worker bee.' She was so flexible — accepting people who came from every spiritual, economic and social level."

Until about a month ago, Ann and her husband — Stephen A. Grant — were the first Altar Guild co-chairs in the church's history.

Team approach

"Whatever they did, they were a great team," Hansen added. "The Guild cares for the altar — silver, linens, candles — and that's a big job. Ann

Sources: Pescadero Canyon preservation deal is withdrawn

■ Escrow did not close last week.

By PAUL WOLF

THE TESCHER-LeVett Co. has withdrawn from a deal to sell its vacant 1.5-acre Pescadero Canyon property at a discount rate to a foundation for preservation as open space, The Pine Cone has learned.

The closing of escrow was imminent on a deal to sell the pristine residential parcel to the Del Monte Forest Foundation, but Tescher-LeVett withdrew last Thursday, informed sources told the newspaper.

The nonprofit organization was set to buy the property — located next to Carmel's northern border — for a third of fair-market value.

Monterey County officials have approved plans for the construction of a two-story single-family house and determined an environmental impact report is not necessary for the planned development.

Opponents of development have appealed The Monterey County Board of Supervisors decision to the California Coastal Commission, which has scheduled the item on its April 13 agenda.

LOOKING AHEAD

■ Mission Fields resident says neighbors must be prepared to look after themselves in the event of another next disaster.

By SUSAN BECK

NANCY CALLAHAN decided to take action after the Carmel River flooded her Mission Fields home twice.

The certified public accountant and financial planner volunteered for a Neighborhood Preparedness Subcommittee under the direction of Monterey County 5th District Supervisor Sam Karas.

Callahan also is organizing a Mission Fields Residents Association, which will help neighbors prepare themselves for another disaster rather than relying on government agencies.

"This is so out of character for me," the San Francisco native said. "I've never been a joiner."

Callahan and her husband, Richard, and their 13-year-old son, Patrick, moved to Mission Fields in 1992.

"The price was right," she noted. "And it's a great neighborhood for kids."

When the lender required flood insurance on their new house, the Callahans took that as a "big clue" and purchased a $1,200- a-year personal property flood insurance policy as well.

"It paid off," she said self-consciously. "Our experience has been very different from many of our neighbors. I feel a little guilty."

The Callahans also were fortunate to get another clue that spared them from the devastation that many of their friends and neighbors had experienced.

After the Monday, Jan. 9 storm caused a power outage at their house on Mission Fields Road, they listened to the radio for entertainment.

When a Carmel Valley woman called KSCO in Santa Cruz to say the Carmel River was flooding, the Callahans immediately called the Carmel Police Department, Monterey County Sheriff's Department and Office of Emergency Services.

Mission Fields resident Nancy Callahan wades through stacks of paperwork documenting her familly's losses during the Jan. 10 flood.

"They all said there was nothing to worry about," Callahan recalled. "But our gut feeling was that something was happening."

At midnight, her husband, a sales representative for Makita Power Tools, went down to the Carmel River Bridge and discovered that the Carmel River was one foot below the structure.

At 1:30 a.m., Callahan called the sheriff's department again.

"I was told, 'Lady, the best thing you can do is to go to bed. If there is a problem, we will give everyone an hour lead time to leave the area.'"

The family packed personal its belongings, such as pictures, and went to bed in street clothes.

"We barely heard the sheriff's sirens at 5 a.m.," Callahan remembers. "We had five minutes to get out of our house."

More than most, the couple was as prepared as they could be, given the information they had to work with.

"We did all of the right things," she said. "We just got the wrong message. It taught me that I have to be responsible for knowing what's going on, to make it easier for my family and neighbors if there is another flood."

Last week, Callahan and several other Mission Fields residents held their first planning meeting to organize a neighborhood association.

The planners hope the association will function as a social organization and a neighborhood watch in case of another disaster. There also are plans to start a Carmel River Watch Committee.

"I see a tremendous renewal for Mission Fields," Callahan said. "I sense a commitment that I didn't perceive before. Our friends knocked themselves out to be kind to us. Now, I can do something for them."

Briefly Speaking

Rain, wind predicted for next 3 days, but system generally 'weak'

YES, THERE'S a new frontal system moving into this area, the National Weather Service reported Wednesday, but it will mean windbreakers and umbrellas — not flood bulletins.

"That system's weak," NWS forecaster Steve Smart said from his Monterey office.

"On Thursday, we'll see increasing variable clouds with a slight chance of showers. Friday — give it a 40 percent chance of rain. There's a chance of Saturday showers, with showers decreasing from then on through the weekend."

Total weekend action should produce "no more than a quarter inch of rain," Smart judged. "Keep windbreakers and umbrellas handy. As for heavy rainfall, we just don't see it happening."

Mariners to gather for conference

A MARINE User's Conference, open to all Monterey Bay mariners and the general public, will be held from 7 to 9 tonight at the Monterey Conference Center, located at One Portola Plaza in downtown Monterey.

Several experts will be on hand to address weather-related subjects, according to organizers. Topics to be discussed include weather data buoys, marine radiofax broadcasts, oceanographic analyses, El Nino, NOAA Weather Radio, marine forecasts/warnings as well as modernization of the National Weather Service.

More information: 656-1716 or 656-1725.

Coping with disaster program set

SALINAS VALLEY Memorial Hospital will present an "Emotional Reactions to Natural Disaster" program from 7 to 9 p.m. Wednesday in the Samuel Downing Resource Center Conference Room at the Hospital, located at 450 East Romie Ln. in Salinas.

Presenters will be Dr. George McKechnie and Dr. Kathleen Dee Davis.

Pre-registration is required by April 10, and may be completed by calling 759-1890. The program is free.

Local firm makes flood donation

THE EMPLOYEES of CTB/McGraw-Hill and McGraw-Hill School Systems have contributed $10,000 to the American Red Cross in support of its assistance to residents of Monterey and Santa Cruz counties following the recent floods.

Employees began a spontaneous fundraising campaign on March 13.

Quake rescue worker wouldn't bet life on 'Duck, Cover & Hold'

State official refutes challenge to long-embraced doctrine

By PAUL WOLF

DOUGLAS COPP has crawled through the rubble in El Salvador, witnessed the carnage in classrooms in Mexico City and dug through commercial buildings in Kobe.

His conclusion: "Duck, Cover and Hold," the familiar earthquake survival doctrine, does not save lives; it takes them.

■ PINE CONE SPECIAL REPORT:

'Earthquake Preparedness Month'

"It's simple: if you get under the bed, the legs are going to break and you'll be squashed," explained Copp, who is rescue chief and executive director of the American Rescue Team, which has assisted in rescue efforts throughout the world.

The doctrine is taught world over. In proclaiming his viewpoint, Copp recognizes he is opposing the well-entrenched prevailing wisdom.

As he reflects on April's statewide Earthquake Preparedness Month, Copp declares there is a better way than ducking and covering: Lie next to a large object.

According to Copp, when buildings collapse, "voids" — that is, empty spaces — are created around sofas, filing cabinets stuffed with papers, desks and floor safes. The key is to make sure you can identify these safe spots and position yourself correctly.

"'Duck and Cover' is a bad idea perpetuated by politicians and members of the Office of Emergency Services (OES) who, like ostriches, bury their heads in the sands and pretend that buildings do not fall," said Copp, an Alameda, Calif., resident who runs Demco, a demolition company.

He has joined his all-volunteer organization on dozens of missions, which have taken him through roughly 700 damaged buildings.

Sticking to doctrine

Meanwhile, the OES maintains its commitment to the familiar doctrine.

"In the vast majority of cases, 'Duck and Cover' will be the most important life-saving step," said Jaime Arteaga, OES public officer.

In fact, numerous "Duck, Cover and Hold" drills have been staged this week as part of the Earthquake Preparedness Month's programs and activities.

Arteaga makes the following points:

■ That method of self-protection should work for California homeowners and renters, who generally live in reinforced wood homes that tend not to collapse on them in earthquakes.

"You may not be able to inhabit your home, but the structure is probably going to withstand the earth-

City fire department to conduct earthquake preparedness classes

WITHIN THE general framework of Earthquake Preparedness Month, Carmel Fire Department will offer Neighborhood Emergency Response Team (NERT) classes during April.

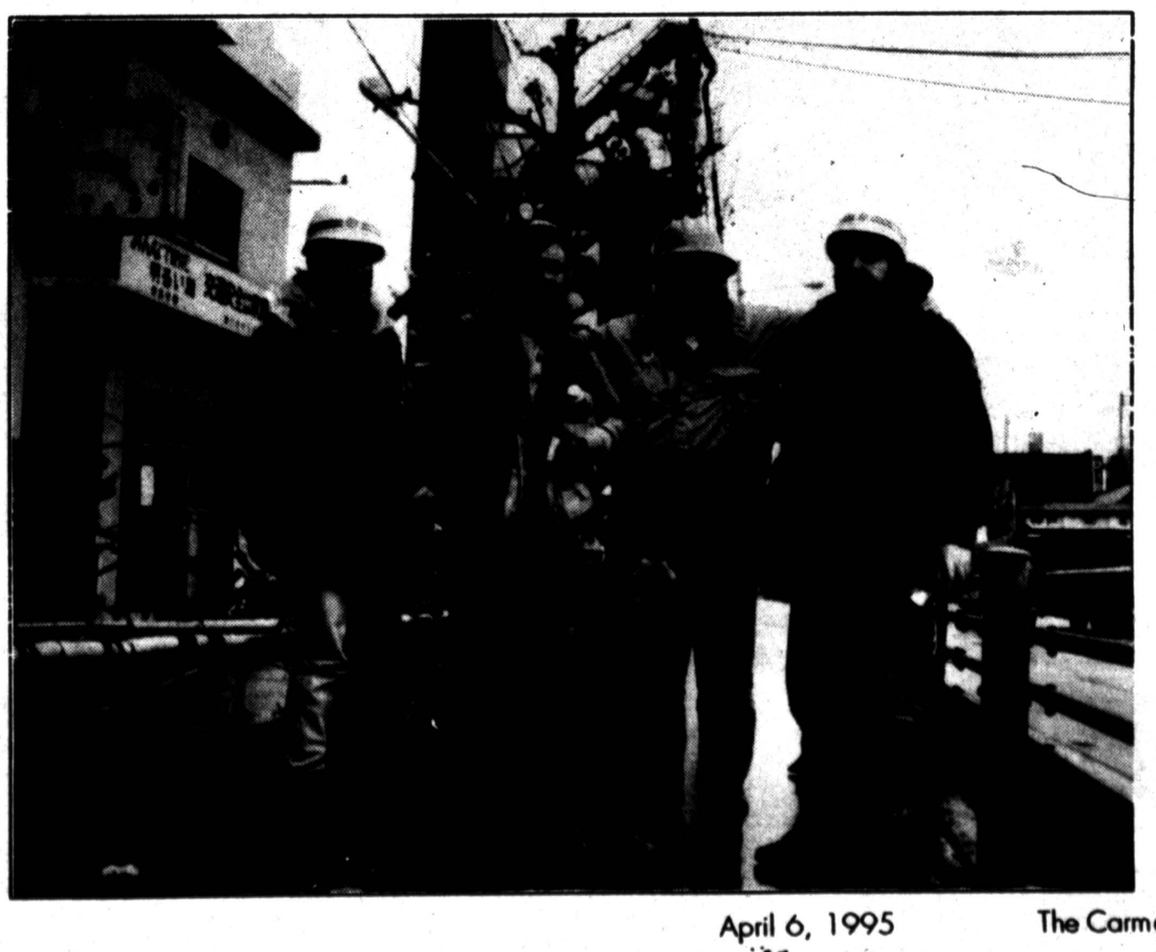
The sessions were described on Wednesday by Fire Chief Bill Hill, who noted that Carmel City Council "this week allocated $1,000 for class preparation."

No dates or sites have been selected as yet, Hill said. The agency is contacting neighborhood organizations to see how many groups and individuals are interested in the course (five evenings at 2-1/2 hours each).

"Earthquake preparation is our model," Hill continued, "because it requires the widest response. We teach people how to survive the first 72 hours — until emergency services can reach them. That's an arbitrary time span based on national experience."

Coordinating the local NERT efforts is Assistant Fire Chief John Willett. Serving as instructors are three Carmel firemen who got their teacher training at San Francisco Fire Department — Ian Watts, Bruce Meyer, Mitch Kastros.

"We're cranked up and ready to go," Hill said. "The NERT classes represent our major thrust in the area of disaster response training."



Doug Copp, second from right, took a moment to pause for this photo with a group of international rescue workers, who were a part of the Kobe, Japan earthquake clean-up effort. Copp claims the long-adhered-to doctrine of 'Duck and Cover' would not have worked in most of the buildings he and his crew have explored.

Scrooge in springtime?

IT SEEMS that Scrooge, the hard-hearted one, skulks about in springtime as well as when Yule chimes come.

That conclusion was implicit within a crime item reported this week by Monterey County Sheriff's Department.

"Due to flood waters in the Mission Fields area," the item went, "William Silva was forced to leave his appliances in his front yard while his house is being repaired.

"Unknown persons removed his dryer, washer and refrigerator from his front lawn."

City council OKs repair of Scenic embankment

Work expected to begin this month

By SCOTT BREARTON

THE CARMEL City Council has approved a one-time expenditure of $89,110 to repair erosion on the west side of Scenic Road north of 12th Avenue in Carmel.

The unanimous decision to approve a contract with Granite Construction Co. was reached Tuesday, according to Carmel Public Works Director Jim Cullem, who noted the local company was the lowest bidder when bids closed on March 31.

The erosion along the Scenic Road embankment began during the storms of February 1993, Cullem said, and has progressively worsened since this year's severe storms in January and March. In a recent budget study session, council members identified shoring up the embankment along Scenic Road as one of the city's highest priorities.

"During the winter storms of 1995, the embankment area was further damaged," Cullem noted, "creating a public safety hazard for pedestrians on the walkway above the embankment, as well as for beach users at its base.

"In addition," Cullem added, "further failure of the embankment area threatens Scenic Road and some of the utility lines contained therein."

Both Cullem and City Administrator Jere Kersnar are hopeful the City of Carmel will qualify for federal and state disaster assistance to reimburse city coffers for the sizeable one-time expenditure.

"I'd say we have about a 50-50 chance," Cullem related.

Following the February 1993 storm and subsequent natural disaster declaration, Cullem said the public works department applied for federal and state assistance through the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the state Office of Emergency Services.

Although Kersnar said federal or state reimbursement for damage incurred in 1993 is not likely, he is hopeful the effects of this year's storms will get the attention of FEMA and OES officials.

'Disaster-level storms'

"Certainly our position is going to be that this is clearly an area that has been damaged by disaster-level storms, not just your run-of-the-mill storms," Kersnar said. "Our concern is that it's going to start undermining the roadway."

Cullem said the work will begin within the next 30 days and will take about two weeks to complete. He said it should be completed by Memorial Day.

While the project will involve the use of heavy machinery — both on the road and on the beach — Cullem said there will be few environmental impacts associated with the work. He noted the repairs have been reviewed by the Carmel Planning Commission and have undergone a California Environmental Quality Act (CEQA) review.

Cullem said there may be some "localized detours" during the work, but noted any inconvenience would be minor.

quake," Arteaga explained.

He said falling objects are a bigger concern than falling ceilings. Copp, however, disagrees with that premise.

■ Lying next to large objects can be hazardous to your health. "Filing cabinets have a tendency to fall over," Arteaga noted. "They are going to smash you against a wall, if they are not bolted to the floor."

Moreover, Arteaga questioned the wisdom of finding safe spots in a collapsing building: "You don't know where there is going to be a void until everything has collapsed."

■ Remaining stationary in a safe place means you are not exposing yourself to flying objects and broken glass. Also, you are given time to plan your evacuation and look after loved ones.

"You remain conscious, alert and awake," Arteaga said.

As for Copp, his personal experience tells him otherwise. For starters, he has had three structures collapse on him during rescues. But he practiced what he preaches and he came out unscathed.

A little bit of knowledge is the best way to survive, he said.

"In Kobe, I helped search five commercial buildings in a row. You would come to a collapsed building and say, Where do I start first? It is completely pancaked. No bother to search.' Then you see an open area, or a void, and you say, 'If someone was inside a void they wouldn't have been hurt.'"

In many cases, he said, a "99 percent chance of death can be converted into a 75 percent survivability."

First floods, now construction noise plague Carmel motel

Memorial Day.

The bridge is being constructed just east of the original Carmel River Bridge, which collapsed during the March 10 flood.

"Business is bad," Meixelsperger said Tuesday morning. "We lost all of our customers after the first flood (Jan. 10). All of our 24 cabins were flooded. We lost them all over again after the second flood."

While most of the guests scheduled at the inn's cabins during February and March have canceled their reservations, some have agreed to stay at the small motel.

"My seasonal guests are my bread and butter," Meixelsperger explained. "They pull me through the winter. But most of them didn't come this year. And now, we're having complaints about the noise."

To make matters worse, after the new bridge is built it will take about another month to tear down the temporary Bailey Bridge and restore the river bank.

"That ruins the summer," Meixelsperger said. "I've got a full house for the Big Sur Marathon, and I'll have August, September and October. But those are the only real income earning months that I can see for the year. It's going to be hard."

Meanwhile, neighboring businesses across the highway at The Crossroads shopping center say business is down slightly, but better than expected.

"No one has complained about the noise," according to Joni Manzo, assistant manager of Pezzini Farms. "Some businesses are doing better at this time compared to last year. I don't think it has affected us as badly as some people think. We are doing really good."

John Bayer, manager of Baker's Square Restaurant and Pie Shop, said the restaurant relies mainly on local repeat customers rather than tourism.

"Business is picking up," he noted. "I think we are doing really well considering everything that's going on."

If RGW Construction, Inc., completes the bridge prior to May 22, the firm will get a $20,000 bonus for each day it shaves off that target date.

Big Sur Marathon needs Caltrans' OK

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

BIG SUR Marathon officials were scheduled to meet Wednesday afternoon with the state Department of Transportation (Caltrans) to get the final approval to proceed with the April 30 race event.

Along with marathon representatives and Caltrans, RGW Construction, Inc., Granite Construction Co. and Monterey County 5th District Supervisor Sam Karas had arranged to meet at 3 p.m. to discuss the feasibility of getting 7,000 walkers and runners, as well as vehicles, across the temporary one-lane Bailey Bridge from 7:30 a.m. to noon that Sunday.

"It's incredibly complex," said Bill Burleigh, race director.

"But so far we haven't met any resistance."

County supervisors approved a proposal Tuesday to handle traffic problems on race day by eliminating vehicle use from 8:45 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. across the bridge on Highway 1 that spans the Carmel River.

Guests from the Highlands Inn traveling north would be allowed to cross the bridge at 10:45 a.m.

"Everyone will suffer some inconveniences," Burleigh said. "But the most important thing is to make it happen."

Judge grants board restraining order against local doctor; hearing April 14

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE STATE Medical Board's charges against him include fraudulent self-prescribing of controlled substances and attempting to steal two bottles of wine from a Monterey liquor store.

Whatever human tragedy those allegations may imply, Judge Richard Silver of Monterey Superior Court moved first to protect citizens who might have sought treatment at the Monterey office of Dr. Joseph Orsulak (obstetrics-gynecology).

Judge Silver granted the board a full temporary restraining order against Orsulak's medical license. At a hearing on April 14, Orsulak will have the chance to convince the court that the order should not remain in effect until the board makes a final decision regarding that license.

The board alleges code violations related to abuse of prescribing privileges, substance abuse and petty theft. One count purports that Orsulak furnished prescription drugs and alcohol to a minor.

The board cited cases in which Orsulak was arrested on suspicion of driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs. In two instances, arresting officers said he had concealed and loaded handguns in his vehicle.

According to the board, Orsulak

Burglars strike at two Carmel businesses

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

BURGLARS LIKE what they're finding in Carmel, if possible repeat engagements are any indication.

Reporting two new burglaries this week, Carmel Police spokesperson Pete Poitras said one seemed related to a break-in that happened on March 7, and the other may well have involved the swift serial burglar of March 9 (15 places entered while the last storm howled).

One at a time:

■ Between 5 p.m. Tuesday, March 28, and 6:30 a.m. the next day, Detective Sgt. Poitras said, a burglar entered through a window and stole $3,000 in computer equipment from the law firm of Millard, Morris and Staples — courtyard offices at Dolores and Sixth. Taken was an entire system, including printer and answering machine.

"Again," he sighed, "the establishment was not equipped with an alarm. How many ways can we recommend installation? This (entry) probably was a deal where the equipment will be fenced. We think it's the same burglar who took several computers from the Mitchell Group (Carmel real estate agency) on March 7."

Because the long-term serial burglar takes cash only, Poitras felt that the computer thief was "a separate individual."

■ Between 6 p.m. Monday and 10 a.m. Tuesday of this week, Poitras continued, a burglar forced the rear door of Pacific Rim at San Carlos and Seventh, later fleeing with less than $300. This clothing shop also had no burglar alarm, the detective said.

"It may well have been our serial opportunist (of the stormy night when officers were occupied with emergency calls)," Poitras said. "The methods and targeted loot are different. To make the point once more, there's a reasonable likelihood that we're dealing with two different burglars — the money guy and the computer guy."

On the night of 18 attempted burglaries (entry was not gained at three businesses), a security camera at Ron's Liquors caught that criminal's face on film. The Lawrence Livermore Lab is still working on a digital enhancement of pertinent frames, Poitras said.

"By early next week," he added, "we should have an enhanced image that possibly can be used. Once we get a worthwhile image, still photos and footage will be furnished to the media."

And where might this serial burglar be today? "I'm sure he's still out there," Poitras said. "On the Monterey Peninsula."

Albright admits bridge is mixed blessing

Local restaurateur played key lobbying role with governor

BRIDGE from 1*

Albright's comments were made in Carmel's Carpenter Hall on Monday evening, at a special forum staged by the office of State Sen. Henry Mello, D-Watsonville.

The clock started ticking on the 60-day construction schedule on Sunday. The Fremont-based RGW Construction Inc. was awarded the low bid of $4.4 million.

At the meeting, Albright was joined by Bruce Pastorius, Caltrans' resident engineer; representatives from the offices of Rep. Sam Farr, D-Carmel and Assemblyman Bruce McPherson, R-Santa Cruz; Monterey County Supervisor Sam Karas and Carmel Mayor Ken White.

Also on hand was Ted Balestreri, Monterey restaurateur and peninsula business leader.

He discussed his role in the successful lobbying effort to secure Gov. Pete Wilson's authorization for the speedy delivery of a permanent new bridge.

The consensus has been that fast-tracked construction is necessary to prevent continued losses to the tourism industry.

Ted Balestreri

Most of the roughly 40 people who attended the meeting live in or near the project's zone of impact. They listened to officials explain, quite candidly, that their quiet lives would be severely disrupted by around-the-clock work.

"You are going to hear some noise like you've never heard before," Karas exclaimed. "There is going to be jarring and banging like you won't believe."

The transportation department has been known to distribute earplugs and even put up the sleepless in motels. "We want to hear from you, and we will see what we can do on a case-by-case basis," Albright said. "We do want to hear from you if you find it unbearable."

He passed out two phone numbers:

- To reach a "live person" about complaints: 372-0862.
- To listen to a taped status report of bridge construction, updated daily and referred to as the hotline: 624-8904.

The aesthetics issue was a key subject for Albright and Pastorius, as the two wished for no surprises not only on construction impacts but on changes to the area's character.

The two had no "architectural drawings" to share with the audience "because the project was put together so fast that there are no such plans."

Carmel River Lagoon deemed safe

THE LATEST tests have indicated that Carmel River Lagoon is pollution-free, County Environmental Health Director Walter Wong said this week. Warnings had been posted after recent flooding carried dangerous bacteria into the local waters, but Wong's agency declared that the lagoon now is safe.

Eastwood, Madden to co-chair telethon to aid flood victims

MONTEREY COUNTY flood victims will be helped by proceeds from a fundraising telethon to be carried over KSBW-TV on Wednesday, April 26, it was announced this week.

The live telethon will occur at Monterey Conference Center on that date, organizers said, with the broadcast scheduled from 8 to 11 p.m. and Clint Eastwood and John Madden serving as event co-chairpersons.

The goal: $1 million raised and distributed among flood victims. KSBW-TV had planned to host a flood relief show and joined forces with the telethon organizing committee upon learning of its hopes.

Parties interested in donating services or funds — or simply wishing more information — may contacts the office of County Supervisor Sam Karas (647-7755).

"Advance donation and audience ticket information will be provided shortly," organizers said.

IN APPRECIATION: ANN GRANT

helped our wedding coordinator, too. Cost was no factor when she reached out to others."

Memorial services were held at All Saints' Episcopal Church on Wednesday afternoon for the much-loved lady, who died at age 77 last Saturday at Hospice of the Central Coast in Monterey. Not long before the occasion, Stephen Grant spoke quietly about Ann and their 38-year adventure in wedlock.

"Marrying her was the smartest thing I ever did," he said. "While I was Carmel's mayor (1966-68), Ann took it all in stride. Behind every man who accomplishes anything, there's a great woman — and she was one, certainly."

Ann was born on Aug. 26, 1917, to Carmel Valley's Roy Martin and Metta Schulte. "Her family of origin was pretty prominent," Stephen said. "They owned all the property from River School to Carmel Point, selling it 60 years ago for $200,000."

In his voice — nearly four decades of mutuality and tenderness. "She was generous, loving, intelligent, well-read, considerate, a good mother, a good wife."

Nursing profession

Her compassion showed up early. After graduating from Monterey High, she completed requirements for a nursing degree from University of California, Berkeley.

She was a nurse when those bombs hit Pearl Harbor in 1941. She noted the suffering, and where her skills could serve best, and joined the Army Nurse Corps.

She married Navy officer Walter Hackbarth and returned to Carmel for the birth of her first son, John Hackbarth. Walter was killed in World War II.

After grief, more caring for others. Ann then worked for several Monterey Bay Area doctors. She married Army officer Stephen Grant; they welcomed two more sons — Patrick and Robert Grant.

"Ann was very concerned about young people," Hansen recalled. How true. Mrs. Grant was president of the American Field Service (Carmel chapter), and hosted many foreign high school students. She also was a Cub Scout leader.

Heritage House and Meals on Wheels had the benefit of her works as board member. "Such a caring human being," Hansen said. "The team, the two of them — Ann and Stephen."

Along with her husband and three natural sons, survivors include brother Jack Martin of Carmel, adopted son Thomas Farrell of San Diego, 11 grandchildren, four great grandchildren and many relatives in the Martin family and other early California clans.

After Wednesday's memorial service, there was a reception at the church's Grant Hall.

The family asks that any memorial contributions be sent to Hospice of the Central Coast, P.O. Box 1798, Monterey 93942 — or Altar Guild at All Saints' Episcopal Church, P.O. Box 1296, Carmel 93921.

CBA to spearhead effort to boost city's tourism outlook

crease that will put the city in line with Monterey County, which recently raised its own transient occupancy tax (TOT) from 10 to 10.5 percent to focus more on "destination marketing."

The council voted 4-1 with Barbara Livingston dissenting.

"I think this needs more thought," Livingston said before the vote. "We need more options. This increase needs more analysis and explanation."

The rate change is expected to go into effect with the start of the new fiscal year July 1.

The request, originating with the Carmel Innkeepers Association, reflects the sense of urgency to improve the tourist trade. Hospitality officials say it was hurting well before the twin floods clouded the image of the Central Coast.

One of many

The CBA is one of many agencies in the area working to combat the false impression that the region is flood-torn and cannot accommodate visitors.

Typically, hospitality professionals are leery of room tax increases because, as they frequently explain, raising the TOT can result in lower occupancy overall, thus defeating the purpose of a hike.

"I think this is the first time I have seen the business community want to tax itself," observed Councilman Bob Fischer.

■ There was not a "direct link" between the TOT increase and new revenues for marketing because the council cannot earmark a portion of room tax revenue for a specific purpose, according to City Administrator Jere Kersnar.

Voting unanimously, the council instructed Kersnar to negotiate a multi-year contract with the Carmel Business Association (CBA) for additional efforts to attract visitors to Carmel.

Funding would start at $142,000, but could go up or down, at the council's discretion, Kersnar said.

Monterey County, with its own new commitment to destination marketing, has enlisted the help of the Monterey County Tourism and Travel Alliance.

Even before the Jan. 10 and March 10 flood disasters, the CBA was planning to boost efforts to improve the tourism outlook for the spring and summer.

Comparatively speaking, the village emerged unscathed compared to hard-hit communities that witnessed extensive property damage. Nevertheless, the media images of a ravaged region have affected tourism in and around the village.

In the days after the March event, the volume of business at Carmel inns, shops and restaurants was down "25 to 30 percent," according to CBA Executive Director Toni Jepson. In recent days, the dropoff has been more like 15 percent.

"Business was not affected as much in January as in March," Jepson said. "January is generally a very bad month because people expect rains. It is unfortunate because all the conditions were there for a good March."

During the current 1994-95 fiscal year, the CBA is spending roughly $135,000 on destination marketing. But that is not enough to compete with the increased spending observed in other destinations throughout California, Jepson said.

Well before the floods, the CBA began interviewing firms interested in playing a key role in marketing the city. Murphy/O'Brien Communications, a Los Angeles-based public relations firm, was selected.

According to Jepson, it already has become instrumental in promoting a "senior package" for reduced rates at inns, restaurants, golf courses and other places, and organizing a visit by travel and food writers, and creating press kits about Carmel.

At Tuesday's meeting, council members agreed they can trust the CBA to find the best uses for the city funding. It would be in appropriate, if not impossible, for city officials to insinuate themselves into the decision-making process, council members agreed.

David Eagle, co-owner of the Clam Box restaurant, is looking ahead to an uncertain future with his downtown Carmel establishment. The Clam Box building, in which the restaurant has been located for 34 years, is up for sale. The end result may be that Eagle's restaurant will have to relocate.

Clam Box building up for sale; relocation possible for venerable Carmel restaurant

BySUSAN BECK

CARMELITES AND visitors have dined at the Clam Box Restaurant on Mission between Fifth and Sixth since 1961. But that tradition may soon change.

The Motta family is selling the building where the quaint pink establishment has been located for the past 34 years. And although David and Diane Eagle — owners of the Clam Box since 1980 — have the first option to buy the property, the $1.1 million asking price may be "out of our ballpark," David Eagle said.

In 1971, Diane's parents, Clyde and Geneieve Herr, bought the restaurant from its second owners, the Morgnegg family. The Clam Box was originally owned by the Motta family, who also owned the Spinning Wheel Restaurant.

Meanwhile, Gaston and Walter Georis — owners of the building adjacent to the Clam Box where Casanova Restaurant is located — have made a bid for the property.

KSBW, KCCN recipients of awards

Two local television stations are basking in the glow of having won awards in separate competitions. Here's a closer look:

■ KSBW-TV 8 has been awarded a 1994 George Foster Peabody Award for its program Just Because: Tales of Violence, Dreams of Peace, directed by Monterey native Scott Evers.

Just Because* deals with the issue of perpetrators and victims of youth violence. The 60-minute program was produced with a volunteer cast and crew of more than 300.

KSBW-TV is the smallest market to receive a Peabody since the awards' inception in 1939.

■ KCCN-TV 46 has been awarded "best live coverage of a news event" by the Associated Press (AP) and North California Radio-Television News Directors Association (RTNDA). The category for the AP Award includes all of California and Nevada; the category for the RTNDA award includes Northern California.

The award-winning coverage surrounded the discovery of live dynamite in an unoccupied home near Highway 1 in Monterey on Aug. 25, 1994.

Clam Box owners ponder next move

"It's very rare in this community to have an adjoining building that is compatible with another business," Gaston Georis said. "That situation doesn't come up often. Our only interest is that it's convenient."

At one time, the Georis family owned four restaurants: La Boheme, Collage and Casanova's in Carmel, plus Fandango in Pacific Grove.

Today, Casanova Partnership — Gaston and Walter Georis are two of its four partners — owns and operates Casanova, which was built in 1977. The other three restaurants have been sold.

"All businesses seem to have a life cycle," Georis said. "I understand how people feel about losing the Clam Box."

If the Eagles decide not to purchase the building they have until Dec. 31 to find another location for their business.

Most of the restaurant's longtime customers have expressed a desire for the owners to stay close to home, according to Eagles.

"It depends on what's available," he said. "I don't want to lose the Clam Box. If we have to, we will go somewhere else. I just feel it will work out. Sometimes change is good."

According to Georis, if he and his brother should purchase the building, there are a number of future possibilities for the space.

For instance, the Eagles or another business could lease it; the space could be used for special events, such as weddings, receptions and community gatherings; or the Casanova Partnership could decide to expand Casanova.

"The owners of the Clam Box have the first option," Georis said. "But if they don't take it, we would like to have it. I have no idea what will happen if we buy it. It would depend on what the city will permit us to do."

entered a "nolo plea" (no contest) last March in San Luis Obispo Municipal Court to a charge of misdemeanor DUI. The attempted wine theft occurred on March 5, board documents said, but "no criminal charges have been filed as yet."

One count reviewed by Judge Silver said Orsulak was arrested March 5 at the scene of a theft from a Monterey hardware store. When police obtained a breath sample, it was stated, Orsulak "showed an alcohol content of .16 percent."

On the same occasion, the board said, a search of Orsulak's car turned up marijuana cigarettes and numerous medicinal bottles — "all bearing Orsulak's name as prescribing physician and various patient names."

According to the board, Orsulak then said that back surgery made him use these drugs for pain relief "and that he used the names of others since physicians cannot self-prescribe."

Community Hospital Foundation names new board

Other board members are CHOMP President/CEO Jay Hudson; Community Hospital Foundation President Tom Tonkin; Chief of the Medical Staff Don Goldman; Anne D. McGowan; Audrey S. Talbott; Walter E. Stewart; David J. Benjamin; and Community Hospital Auxiliary President Frances Friscia. Retiring from the board were trustees Hank Ketcham and Dr. Craig E. Christensen.

Pine Cone hopeful drenched archives can be restored

■ Volumes going back to 1916 may be irreplaceable losses from the fire and sprinkler flood, but there is some promise for their restoration.

By PAUL WOLF

RECALLING THE March 21 fire and sprinkler flood that damaged 52 bound volumes of The Carmel Pine Cone newsrooms, Publisher Karen Carlson noted an irony.

"We tried to get these books out of harm's way, but that is exactly where we put them," she said, noting the volumes were moved from under a ceiling leak and placed on the floor in the very corner that got rained on.

The newsroom fire damaged issues of three Brown & Wilson newspapers besides The Pine Cone — The Monterey Peninsula Review, The Carmel Valley Outlook and The Pacific Grove Monarch.

The soaked volumes include issues dating back to 1916, the year after the historic weekly, now housed on Fourth between Mission and San Carlos, was launched.

"There is a good chance they will be salvaged," Carlson said. "We are going to be getting follow-up reports on their status."

Into a freezer

For now, the books have been placed in a walk-in freezer in Monterey "to prevent further damage," according to Jesse Lizama, cleaning operations manager with Ream Construction & Disaster Cleaning, who is seeking the help of a paper restoration specialist.

Lizama said each of the volumes suffered a different level of damage. "Also," he said, "there are varying degrees of brittleness in the paper, which affects how they should be treated."

There is some cause for optimism,

Where There's a Will...

By THOMAS HART HAWLEY

'Opening the door' on Medicare, Medi-Cal

EVERY FAMILY, it seems, has one. And the Dodger family is no exception.

Art's Uncle Albert is the rogue bachelor of the family who, over the years, has lived the good life while making and losing fortunes in exotic foreign ventures. Uncle Al drops in every so often to see the Dodger family and, incidentally, to borrow a couple thousand dollars to tide him over to his next fortune.

Art was reminded of Uncle Al just the other day — rather vividly, in fact, when he opened the front door and found him standing on the stoop looking absolutely dreadful. It seems Al's diet of martinis and bar snacks has caught up with him. His liver has finally gone out on strike. His doctor says he needs nursing home care.

Of course, this medical emergency has caught Uncle Al in one of his financial troughs. He is, therefore, more than merely curious to know what public benefits are available to cover the cost of his care.

■ The Cost: Nursing home care in California costs an average of $2,911 per month. On the Monterey Peninsula, it is about $3,000 to $3,500 a month. Locked facilities run as high as $4,000.

■ Medicare: Medicare is a federal program run as part of the Social Security system. It provides no benefits for mere "custodial care." It does provide limited support for "skilled care" but only after a minimum of three days of hospitalization.

Medicare then pays all the cost of the first 20 days in a nursing home, everything over $84.50 per day for the next 80 days, and nothing after that. Supplemental Medicare insurance pays only the $84.50 for days 21 through 100. Since Uncle Al's liver cannot even be brought to the bargaining table in 100 days, Al must look elsewhere for help.

■ Medi-Cal: Medi-Cal is a combined federal and state program designed to provide nursing home benefits for the needy. Medi-Cal defines needy on the basis of income and assets. Al, while in the nursing home, must first spend all his own income on the cost of his care (less only $35 per month) before Medi-Cal will spend a dime.

Al is also limited in what he can own. For example, he can have no more than $2,000 of non-exempt assets. The most important exempt asset is his residence. Remarkably, the value of the residence doesn't matter. Al could reside in the Hearst Castle (which, unfortunately, he doesn't) and still qualify for Medi-Cal benefits. As long as he declares his intent to return home, his residence will remain exempt regardless of the gravity of his medical condition.

Also exempt are the following assets:

■ The family farm or business regardless of value;

■ Rental property with an equity not exceeding $6,000;

■ Equipment and materials used in a person's employment;

■ Other miscellaneous assets including a burial plot, a car, home furnishings, personal effects and certain life insurance.

Some assets, like IRAs, work related pensions, and annuities, although not exempt, do not affect Medi-Cal eligibility. But this is true only if the individual is receiving regular distributions which, of course, Medi-Cal claps onto.

Next time: We will look at some strategies to preserve wealth while still qualifying for Medi-Cal.

Thomas Hart Hawley, who has practiced on the Monterey Peninsula since 1969, is a certified specialist in estate planning, trust and probate law. Hawley's practice is located on San Carlos between 7th and 8th in downtown Carmel. He can be reached at 624-5339.

Perry Newberry was founder of Carmel vision, writer says

He became 'community leader' shortly after arriving in 1910

By PAUL WOLF

AT FIRST glance, the title of her talk, "Perry Newberry — Inventor of Carmel," seemed a bit of an overstatement.

Nevertheless, as Bonnie Gartshore, columnist for The Monterey County Herald, explained, Newberry's most important contribution — his vision of a perpetual village — was rather indispensable.

Gartshore spoke in separate morning and afternoon talks last week at Harrison Memorial Library in Carmel as part of the Henry Meade Williams Local History Lecture series.

Bonnie Gartshore says Perry Newberry boasted 'incredible energy.'

Multifaceted. Energetic. Unconventional. Environmentally attuned. These were the attributes of the one-time mayor (1922-24), editor of The Pine Cone, builder, actor and writer.

He thrived in cluttered studios and work spaces, Gartshore explained, but his thoughts about what Carmel should be and what it should not turn into were perfectly coherent.

"He had incredible energy and he was always involved in so many things at once," she said.

Who was Newberry?

Gartshore related parts of Newberry's personal life in order to shed light on his public persona.

Although not a tradesperson per se, this maker of ideas was also a builder of homes, which seemed to bring out his eccentricities. Gartshore quoted poet Robinson Jeffers, a fellow Carmelite, commenting on Newberry's digs on Carmelo:

"Windows would appear where there were none before, and then vanish again. The shape of the roof would change, and a dormer would blossom through it. All this was more mysterious because no one ever saw anyone at work."

The "inventor" of Carmel, who died in 1938, presented a vision. Again Jeffers: "He was doing more than any one man to keep Carmel tolerably simple, quiet and tree-protected in spite of progress."

Gartshore invested much meaning in the fact that Newberry, born and raised in a small town in Michigan, lived among the first families to own a typewriter.

He spent much of his early adulthood in the San Francisco Bay Area, displaying a remarkable range of vocations, whether in tandem or in succession. He sold insurance, did police work, wrote for and published newspapers and, eventually, authored stories for boys.

(Newberry's plays, books, mysteries — co-authored by writer Alice McGowan — and short stories are available for viewing at the library, but cannot be checked out.)

"The day after he arrived in Carmel (in 1910), he was already an old-timer and a community leader," Gartshore said.

In World War I, he served in France as a YMCA secretary. "Like many of us who leave a place we love and come back, Newberry saw changes that he didn't like."

His campaign for the city's Board of Trustees (same as mayor) is now legendary. Possessing a flair for the dramatic and a considerable talent with a pen, he arrived at the following plank during the 1922 contest:

Don't vote for Perry Newberry
If you hope to see Carmel become a city.
If you desire its commercial success.
If you think that a glass factory is of greater value than a sand dune, or a millionaire than an artist, or a mansion than a little brown cottage.
If you truly want Carmel to become a boosting, hustling, wide-awake lively metropolis...

Ever the "anti-politician," Newberry made a point of "asking those who disagree with me to vote against me." He was elected and served only two years.

"If you are going to be the person who pokes at people in power, then you may not like being that person," Gartshore observed.

'Roaring Back to the '20s' is theme of 5th annual house tour

FOLLOWING LAST year's successful Comstock Tour, the Carmel Architectural and Historical Survey will present its fifth annual house tour, "Roaring Back to the '20s," from 1 to 4 p.m. Sunday, April 23.

According to event chairwoman and local historian Enid Sales, this year's tour will include nine Carmel homes built in the 1920s. She said the visual feast will include Tudor, Norman, Craftsman, Cape Cod and Spanish Revival styles of architecture.

Champagne and hors d'oeuvres will be served in an elegant Norman Garden at the end of the tour. Tickets are $10 each and can be purchased at "Carmelshire," located at Carmelo and 12th in Carmel-by-the-Sea.

Within any six months, nine million adults suffer from a depressive illness, says the National Institute of Mental Health. Others estimate that up to one in five older people should get treatment for depressive symptoms but that only a few seek help. Everyone at times temporarily has the "blues," but persistent feelings of sadness, helplessness and hopelessness are among the signs of depression that call for evaluation by a doctor. In most cases, depression responds to treatment.

The last time Jessica Tandy and husband Hume Cronyn acted together on Broadway was in 1986's "The Petition." Such acting might never be seen again, a reviewer wrote. "That's what you think, Buster. We're only beginning," Cronyn recalled his reaction as the two received the first Tony award, in 1994, for lifetime achievement — one of 50 awards received as a couple or as individuals. One was Ms. Tandy's 1990 Oscar as the star of "Driving Miss Daisy." (Croyn was nominated for a 1944 Oscar for his role in "The Seventh Cross." Ms. Tandy, at 84, and Cronyn, 82, continue to act in movies and on TV. If you don't keep acting, "you're just going to lose it," she says.

RLS girls display considerable talent; Carmel knocks off boys tennis team

THE ROBERT Louis Stevenson girls track and field team shined brightly in the Pirates' track and field meet last Thursday with Pacific Grove and Carmel.

RLS coach Willie Suber said there's a ton of individual talent on the team, led by seniors Jen Parsons and Roxanne Klevan, juniors Eliza Lurie and Heather Blackwell, and freshman Daphne Descollonges.

Coach Suber expects all five girls to qualify for Central Coast Section post-season action. And each of them won at least one of their races in the meet with PG and Carmel.

The boys, on the other hand, are enjoying as great a success level, but have a lot of promise for the future. Several important runners are injured, including freshman Chris Jou, who may be the fastest on the team.

Jou's slot is being assumed by English exchange student Graham Rule, who finished second in the 100 on Thursday.

Two notable performances were turned in by junior Barry Wise and senior Peter West. Wise won the 400 and the 800, while West won the two-mile and earned second in the mile. Freshman Ben Froke also made an impact, winning the 200, finishing third in the 100, with a jump of 5-8 in the high jump.

Suber said he expects a real powerhouse boys team "two years down the road," but admitted that this year's team is thin in depth. Before then, he'll have to face Palma and Notre Dame today. Although Palma's boys will probably run away with it, there should be some tight competition between RLS and Notre Dame on the girls' side.

■ BOYS TENNIS

The Stevenson boys' seven-match winning streak came to an end last Thursday. The visiting Carmel Padres, last season's co-champions with the Pirates, were able to pull off a key Mission Trail Athletic League victory in a thrilling marathon match that lasted well into the evening.

With the teams tied at three matches apiece, the decider was the No. 4 singles match between Pirate junior Kelly Lee and Carmel's Austin Poland. The pivotal contest ended in a Poland victory — 6-4, 4-6, 6-2 — and gave CHS, 6-0, the victory.

(The Pirates, who saw their perfect MTAL record blemished, were to get another shot at the Padres yesterday in a match on Carmel's courts after The Pine Cone's press deadline.)

In the match last week, RLS' victories came in the No. 3 and No. 5 singles slots — seniors Johnny Kreitman (6-3, 6-0) and Wiyanto Alamsyah (6-2, 6-2.) The No. 2 doubles team of senior Roberto Maldonado and junior Damien Minsinger were 6-1, 6-4 winners.

The following day, the Pirates resumed their winning ways. They entertained Alisal High on Friday and defeated them 7-0, losing only six games in six matches. Then, on Monday, RLS came away with a 6-1 non-league triumph over Monterey High.

No. 1 singles player Chris Chatham held on after a close first set to come up with the win, 7-5, 6-0, while Nick Garrone breezed by his opponent, 6-1, 6-1. The No. 1 doubles team of sophomore Chris Mouton and junior Jerry Patel came up with a 6-3, 6-1 triumph.

The Pirate record now is 8-1 overall, 6-1 in the MTAL. Their next match is today at Palma.

■ SWIMMING & DIVING

The Pirates continued to show signs of improvement last Friday in the team's only meet of the week — a 98-78 win over Pacific Grove.

The relays buoyed the Pirates. They had only two individual first place finishes, by seniors Wyatt Getz in the 200 IM and Keith Gutterson, who won the 50 freestyle.

Carmel boys, girls register wins

Softball team drops two; to play RLS Friday

AFTER TWO successful meets last Thursday and Saturday, the Carmel High School track and field team faces league foes Alisal and Catalina at 3:30 p.m. today at home.

Last Thursday, the Padres registered a win against Pacific Grove and Robert Louis Stevenson, with many Carmel runners shining at the meet. With so many team members this season, coach John Ables declared, "We had a person filling the lanes in every event for the first time in a long time."

In the boys meet, Carmel finished with 83 points to RLS' 57 and host Pacific Grove's 19. The girls' final numbers were CHS 77, RLS 52 and PG 25.

Individual contributors were Darlene Tulua — who made her return to the field by winning the discus and shot put from a standing position, so as not to strain her banged-up right knee. The boys' 400 relay team was led by veteran runner Ben Thompson and speedy sophomore Jacob Saxton.

Saxton enjoyed a big day as he was an a winner in the 100 (10.8), long jump (19-3.5) and triple jump (38-5). Thompson also took the 440 with a time of 55.8.

Ryan Gerbrandt turned in a gutty performance, which included a second-place finish in the 440 and a fourth-place finish in the 220, while Ryan Travaille continued his high flying as he snatched a first-place finish in the 120 hurdles.

The long distance duo of Denise Cardamone and Molly Allen led the Padre girls team. Cardamone won the two-mile run, while Allen took first place in the mile, with Cardamone at her heels throughout the race.

Erica Larson jumped to first-place finishes in the high jump and the long jump. Rebecca Eagle turned in a gritty showing in the 4x1 relay.

In a successful return from recent injuries, Heidi Hazen was a victor in the triple jump.

Larson and Tulua were in the news two weeks ago when they traveled to New York to compete in the National Indoor University. Tulua was forced to watch Carrier Dome on the campus of Syracuse University. Tulua was forced to watch from the sidelines with her injured knee, but Larson was able to score a 12th-place finish in the high jump. She had a leap of 5-3 to put her in the middle of the pack in the 29-participant field.

Larson and Tulua, now on the mend, have other nationally oriented events scheduled.

■ SOFTBALL

The girls softball team suffered a pair of losses last week, but hope to rekindle the winning flame Friday against Robert Louis Stevenson in a 4 p.m. game at Carmel Middle School.

Last Wednesday, the Padres let what would have been their third league win slip away in the top of the seventh as Pacific Grove pushed across the winning run, aided by a Carmel overthrow to come out on top 4-3.

Meghan Taylor pitched herself out of several jams for the Padres. Offensive support came from the hitting of Allison Bohnen, Rosie Crivello and Vicki Phillips.

Carmel were humbled last Friday in a matchup with the Notre Dame Spirits. The Padres found themselves spooked in the 20-1 rout.

"Everything that could go wrong went wrong," head coach Neil Jones said.

■ SWIMMING & DIVING

The undefeated Padres paddled their way to a fifth win last Friday with a 61-33 thrashing of Monterey High.

Carmel won every event except one. Swimmer Steven Bonanfant displayed his endurance as he captured the 500 and 200 free, while teammate John Rigney took the 200.

All-around swimmer Kent Wehde also pulled in a pair of firsts in the

By DOUG THOMPSON

WITH STELLAR hurler Brian Kirkpatrick on the mound for King City High on Tuesday afternoon, a knowledgeable observer may have given Carmel High's baseball team very little hope of emerging with a Mission Trail Athletic League victory.

Not only is Kirkpatrick considered one of the league's top three pitchers, but King City entered its home game against the Padres with a glittering 4-0 record in the MTAL.

But athletic contests aren't ever intended to be decided on paper, and when all was said and done Tuesday on the field, the result was rather eye-popping. The Padres, 1-3 and struggling when the day started, knocked out Kirkpatrick in the first inning when they erupted for six runs en route to a 13-1 triumph.

"We kept playing hard every inning," said a relieved Carmel head coach Mike Kelly, who had grown weary of his team's recent inability to sustain itself for a full seven innings. "We didn't give them anything."

Junior right-hander Matt Allen, a transfer from Robert Louis Stevenson, was particularly stingy on the mound. The Padre pitcher went the distance and limited King City to just four hits. And Allen thwarted whatever comeback King City had hoped for by allowing no walks and striking out five.

In the first inning, Kirkpatrick threw 20 pitches — 15 balls and five strikes, two of which were stung for base hits. Casey Christensen keyed the rally with a two-run single that prompted the Mustangs to replace Kirkpatrick on the mound.

Even though the King City senior was no longer on the mound, and now at shortstop, he hadn't shaken his frustrations. The next batter, Allen, hit a grounder at Kirkpatrick, who promptly threw the ball high over his first baseman's head, allowing two runs to score and opening the flood gates.

Carmel went on to add three runs in the second inning to take an insurmountable 9-0 lead.

The Padres, who had fallen 10-2 to Palma in a MTAL game last Friday, are now 2-3 in the MTAL and sit in fifth place.

Kelly will send right hander John Martine to the mound when the Padres host Robert Louis Stevenson at 4 p.m. Friday.

Carmel will then play RLS again on Saturday, but it'll be a non-league affair that starts at 11 a.m. in Pebble Beach. What follows next week is the traditional Carmel Classic Tournament, which runs Monday through Wednesday. (See "Prep Sports Slate" below for the three-day schedule of games.)

■ RLS softball: Barker blanks Breakers as team goes to 12-1.

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE SIZZLING Robert Louis Stevenson girls softball team, 5-1 in the Mission Trail Athletic League and 12-1 overall, invades Carmel today for a 4 p.m. matchup with the Padres at Carmel Middle School.

The Pirates are fresh off a 3-0 blanking of visiting Pacific Grove, in which standout junior Amy Barker spun a one-hitter and then, for good measure, belted a three-run, inside-the-park home run in the fifth inning to provide the margin of victory.

Barker, 4-1, fanned seven in the route-going performance. Her teammates committed only one error in providing staunch defensive support.

In addition to Barker's blast, junior Erica Daniels banged out two base hits for the winners.

Last Friday, RLS fought back a stubborn Gonzales team as it erupted for six sixth-inning runs en route to an 8-1 home victory. RLS received another complete game on the mound, this time from senior Alison Biondi.

Junior Monica Balestrieri got the Pirates rolling in the first inning with a solo home run. Freshman Casey Hutchings sparked the six-run uprising with a double that knocked in two teammates.

Head coach Ray Sumida and the Pirates participate in a tournament next week at Clovis before returning to MTAL play on April 18 against Santa Catalina at RLS.

■ RLS baseball: The struggle continues as Carmel is next up.

By JOHN DAVI

WITH FRIDAY afternoon's game scheduled against host Carmel High School, the Robert Louis Stevenson baseball team is hoping to show signs of life. As it stands, the Pirates have dropped all five of their MTAL games and are hauntingly looking back at last season when the team was 4-18 overall and finished in the league cellar.

And while the upcoming spring break won't be a vacation from competition, it will represent a hiatus from MTAL play. After Friday's game, the Pirates will host Carmel at 11 a.m. on Saturday in a non-league affair, and then gear up for next week's Carmel Classic Tournament.

After Friday's game, the Pirates won't resume MTAL play until April 21 when they travel to King City.

Stevenson's most recent setback was a 3-1 home loss Tuesday to undefeated Pacific Grove. RLS sophomore Joey Baker went the distance on the mound, scattering seven hits.

But Baker received little help from his teammates' bats, who were limited to two hits by Matt Dalhamer and Charlie Trujillo. The Pirates' lone hitting star was junior Aaron Pritchard, who drilled a sixth-inning, bases empty home run.

Senior right fielder Mike Thompson provided the bulk of defensive highlights for RLS with three diving catches.

individual medley and the backstroke.

■ GOLF

Despite a blistering two-under-par 33 by the Padres' No. 1 linkster, Todd Hoskins, Carmel dropped an MTAL match Tuesday to Palma by 17 strokes at the Spanish Bay Links in Pebble Beach.

Even though Hoskins' nine-hole round bested any Palma golfer by nine strokes, the Chieftains were more consistent in their No. 2 through No. 5 slots.

The loss dropped Carmel to 2-5.

■ BOYS TENNIS

Back-to-back was the prevailing thought in the minds of the CHS boys tennis team last week as it picked up three wins, including a huge victory over defending co-champion Robert Louis Stevenson.

Carmel knifed the Pirates 4-3, and the hero of the afternoon was sophomore Austin Poland, who pulled out a gut-wrenching three-set affair with the match tied up at three wins apiece.

Poland had broken his arm earlier this year, but last Friday he broke open the race for the MTAL crown by spurring the Padre win.

Carmel glided to a pair of other league wins last week by defeating York School (7-0) and a winless Gonzales team (7-0), moving to an impressive 6-0 league record.

■ GOLF

On paper, the Pirate golf team's season might seem to be going perfectly — the league record is 4-0 — but coach John Powers stressed the need for improvement.

"We've got to get better before we can win at CCS and challenge at Nor-Cal," Powers said. "Right now, the team is like a six-cylinder car with only two or three cylinders firing at once. To really perform, we need at least five cylinders in order."

On Tuesday afternoon, Stevenson hosted Pacific Grove, perhaps the MTAL's second-best squad next to RLS, according to Powers. Despite a relatively poor showing, RLS won by 12 strokes. Senior Peter Hannah was medalist with a 39 at Spyglass on a beautiful afternoon for golf: no wind and plenty of sunshine.

Powers named three important future dates for the Pirate golfers: an April 27 rematch against the Breakers on Pacific Grove Municipal Links (which RLS must win to remain undefeated), CCS competition on May 15 and the ever-competitive Nor-Cal championships on May 23.

Return to the table

Dear Editor:

Delight over the sale of the Tescher-LeVett property in Pescadero Canyon turned to disappointment when we learned that the deal had collapsed on the day escrow closed.

It is devastating to think that such a public-spirited, win-win agreement could be scuttled by the implication that it was the result of legal intimidation.

Having testified on the importance of protecting the sensitive habitat in Pescadero Canyon, we salute the parties who brought the negotiations this far. We urge them to return to the table and finalize this critical addition to the open space separating Carmel and the Del Monte Forest.

Levett's anger understandable

Dear Editor:

The March 30 issue of The Pine Cone contained articles framing a gift of generosity by Dennis LeVett, in selling his property in Pescadero Canyon to the Del Monte Forest Foundation, to an act of survival.

The necessary permit procedures were already in place and Mr. Levett had every right to proceed with the project he had undertaken. Mr. Levett, in an effort to keep the open space and maintain the environmentally sensitive area, agreed to sell to the Foundation.

It is easy to see how angry Mr. Levett must have been to have his good intentions construed as an act of weakness, where the threat of litigation was the overriding consideration. We can only hope that the citizenry will rise and convince Dennis Levett to ignore any suggestion that his gift of sale is not for the good of the community.

The Pine Cone should apologize for implying a gift of the heart was an act of surrender. Let us all hope that the deal will be reopened and go through.

Elation to deflation

Dear Editor:

As an opponent of the Tescher-LeVett development in Pescadero Canyon in Del Monte Forest, I was elated to learn of the pending sale of the property to the Del Monte Forest Foundation. I saw this as an encouraging precedent which could lead to future opportunities for open space preservation.

Unfortunately the sale now appears to be in jeopardy. Let us all hope that the spirit of cooperation which prompted the sale will prevail in the best interest of all concerned.

Jeers should be cheers

Dear Editor:

Is this Mudville?

Early last week — in the eighth inning — it looked as if a home run had been hit for Carmel and Pebble Beach residents by Mr. Tescher and Mr. LeVett. These gentlemen agreed to sell their Pescadero Canyon lots to the Del Monte Forest Foundation at a price far below market value, thus ensuring the preservation of this valuable open space.

Devastating for all, especially those who realize the importance of maintaining open space buffers, the home run has turned into an out. All of this apparently caused by an overzealous fan, who couldn't resist putting a negative spin on this generous action by suggesting it was done out of fear of litigation.

When "the other team" makes a responsible decision to help facilitate a worthy goal, the public should react with gratitude, acknowledging the generosity. It's not a good time for gratuitous jeers.

It's the ninth inning, Mr. Tescher and Mr. LeVett. There is still time for that home run, but only you have the ability to hit it out of the park. We hope you reconsider.

What went wrong?

Dear Editor:

The Pine Cone's front-page news last week of Tescher-LeVett's decision to sell their north Pescadero Canyon lot to the Del Monte Forest Foundation was heralded throughout the Monterey Peninsula.

In reaching this agreement, Tescher-LeVett has demonstrated their willingness to put the general interest of the public above the individual interest of the property owner.

However, escrow did not close as planned last Thursday. Why? What happened? What went wrong? Was it because the story quoted an activist who claimed the threat of litigation was the reason for averting development?

I doubt that Tescher-LeVett were influenced to sell their property because of threat of litigation. If this is the public perception, it is wrong. They did, after all, have the necessary permits from Monterey County and the California Coastal Commission to proceed with construction and were prepared to do so.

I choose to believe that Tescher-LeVett and the Del Monte Forest Foundation undertook this joint venture in order to preserve the north side of Pescadero Canyon for the greater benefit of the community.

Genuine, unselfish act

Dear Editor:

I was disappointed to learn that Dennis LeVett and Chris Tescher had withdrawn their offer to sell the lot they own in Pescadero Canyon. I had been impressed with their willingness to help protect part of the Canyon even though their action probably meant some personal financial sacrifice.

I never suspected that their offer was made to avoid the possibility of litigation. I considered it a genuine, unselfish action that would enhance our community's natural resources.

I hope they will reconsider their decision.

A noble, laudable act

Dear Editor:

It was with great thankfulness that I read the headline in the March 30 Pine Cone regarding preservation of the Pescadero Canyon lot owned by Chris Tescher and Dennis and Karen LeVett.

I was grateful to Del Monte Forest Foundation for purchasing it for permanent open space and grateful to the owners for making it available at a discount price. This is such a gift for citizens of both Pebble Beach and Carmel. Preserving open space is a noble and laudable act.

I would particularly like to thank the owners of the lot for not pushing through a difficult and decidedly unpopular project at the expense of the environment and the public viewshed. By making the lot available for purchase, the owners have truly made possible a win-win situation for all concerned and, in particular, our children, who will enjoy the opportunity to view this open space now and in the future.

Opposition has grown

Dear Editor:

Recently I jogged through the Del Monte Forest in an area encompassing the proposed hillside "Forest Course."

I encountered a Pebble Beach Co. work crew with chain saws preparing to remove some trees. I did not see the need. The path seemed clear. Curiosity had the best of me.

"Cutting down 57,000 trees?" I asked referring to the company's ambitious plans for another resort golf course and 403 housing units.

"No," replied one, "we don't get the pleasure!"

I have never hugged a tree out of affection, only for dear life.

My opposition to the Pebble Beach Co.'s "buildout" plan has, until recently, been based principally upon the large volumes of auto and truck traffic that now speeds through unpoliced and once quiet residential areas. But no more.

My opposition has grown. Thanks to The Pine Cone and other publications, many well-informed peninsula residents and researchers, I have learned what an important issue the Monterey Pine and its survival really is. This is an issue we all should embrace.

The Forest should not be taken out of Del Monte.

Kudos to the community

Dear Editor:

Thank you Monterey Peninsula for your generous donations to the many flood victims from Carmel, Castroville and Pajaro.

The response to the Barnyard Merchants Free Store created and generated tremendous community team spirit, positive thinking and generosity. There are many large hearts in our community.

I am very proud to be a part of the Barnyard merchants' spirit and applaud you, our valued Carmel community.

In the 1950s, I experienced my first disaster when my family lost its home in the earthquake in Mexico City. I remember asking my mother, "Where is my doll?"

A sweet senior citizen donated a doll and I believe to this day my love for seniors is because of the one generous lady. Years later my family survived the Loma Prieta Earthquake and my parents the Northridge Earthquake. My mom was able to be the sweet senior to donate the doll once more and recycle the feeling of love that is given with donations.

There is hope when people and volunteers are willing to assist and answer questions for the people in need. The Barnyard merchants have continued to see so many people bringing in toys, food, clothing, linens, books and checks for the American Red Cross.

May I assure you that all of your generosity and donations have gone to the people that are in need. Evening trips have been made by Barnyard merchants to deliver directly to the shelters and to the people. The people have been told that the clothing is from Carmel.

On Sunday, March 19, a young per-

Hollywood's big bomb

Dear Editor:

The first clue for me regarding the direction of the 67th Academy Awards was the inclusion of Pulp Fiction for "Best Picture."

Grotesquely vile and gratuitously violent, Pulp Fiction has taken the motion picture industry into the same bowl that screenwriter Roger Avery told one billion viewers "he needed" at his acceptance speech. Perhaps Roger Avery had a legitimate excuse for lacking class. Maybe he squirmed too long in his seat from the embarrassing performance of David Letterman, who, in prime time, demolished the role of master of ceremonies.

I suppose the wonderful talent and intelligence of prior emcees, such as Bob Hope, Johnny Carson and, my favorite, Billy Crystal, are measures not easily met. But Mr. Letterman, whose insipid attempt at humor from its wretched beginning, through the spinning dog, and interspersed loud shouts and phony laughter, set the course for the failure of this year's Academy Awards.

Hopefully, the Academy of Arts and Motion Pictures will recognize their responsibility to their industry and that the "whole world is watching."

Some late advice to Mr. Letterman: Commit to memory the actors axiom..."If you don't believe in what you're doing, the audience won't believe you either."

Back to you, Lou

Dear Editor:

Ah, enlightenment! I have found a glimmer of the reason that Lou Haddad arrives at different conclusions concerning the New Los Padres Dam than the informed and thinking elements of the community.

In recent statements in The Pine Cone (March 25 letter to the editor and a Feb. 23 Q & A interview), Haddad continues to allege "...only 19 percent (3,381 acre-feet) will be available for municipal use... the other 81 percent will be for fish, the Carmel River environment and recharging the aquifer."

There are very logical reasons for recharging the Carmel River Aquifer and from that successful action beneficial uses are also derived for fish and the riparian environment.

A good many of us learned in our soda-sipping days that with several straws actively being sucked in a container filled with liquid there will come a time when all are sucking air unless and until the container is refilled (recharged).

The same has been found by experience to be true of wells in the aquifer. The water in the aquifer is depleted by pumping, mostly for municipal use but some for irrigation. The recharge waters thus are refilling to replace municipal use, for current municipal use or as reserve for future municipal use, such as a drought reserve.

The 28,000 acre-feet of stored water (drought reserve) in the aquifer at the end of most summers likely means that old codgers like Haddad and me probably will never see rationing again in our lifetime.

Haddad fails to recognize that aquifer recharge and a dramatic improvement in drought protection, as a consequence of the new dam, are valuable, beneficial municipal uses of water. This explains why he remains out of step with the majority of the community and of the water board.

Carmel Commentary

By DICK HEUER

Big-money development aside, we need dam to improve water supply

IN HIS Carmel Commentary in the March 30 issue of The Pine Cone, Carmel resident Tim Zorach opposes the proposed New Los Padres Water Supply Project on grounds that it will encourage excessive growth.

I applaud and share Zorach's concern with protecting our special environment and quality of life. I disagree with his conclusion that this justifies opposition to improving our water supply.

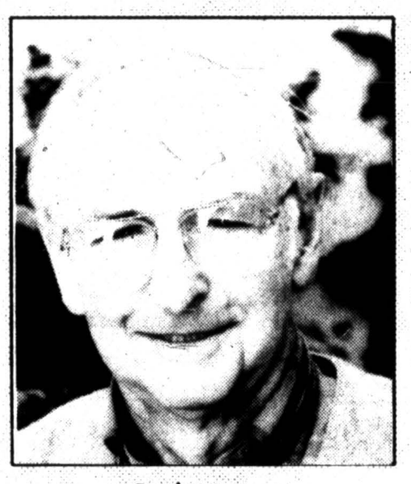
As a Monterey Peninsula Water Management District director with a long public record of concern about excessive or inappropriate growth, I want to explain why I support the dam.

Our existing water supply is inadequate for our present population. Moreover, we are about to lose part of this already inadequate supply because it is produced at the cost of damaging the Carmel River environment.

The State Water Resources Control Board will announce next month its long-awaited decision on complaints that Cal-Am is taking water from the Carmel River without a water rights permit and is damaging "public trust resources" that state law requires be protected.

This decision is expected to substantially reduce Cal-Am's right to take water from Carmel Valley unless the environmental problems are solved. If this decision goes as expected, an additional source of water will be needed just to maintain our existing, inadequate supply.

Without the dam, we can expect water rationing even during normal rainfall years and a permanent moratorium on water permits for new construction and remodeling.



Dick Heuer

Effects of a moratorium

Some who oppose the dam are unconcerned about water rationing. But do they understand how frequent it would be? Some say they would welcome a permanent moratorium on growth. But do they understand that a moratorium hurts the little person, while allowing most of the big-money development in Carmel Valley, Pebble Beach and Sand City to proceed?

With a water moratorium, families are unable to add a bathroom to accommodate growing children or an elderly parent. This is happening in Carmel Valley and Pebble Beach today, as the county has used up its water allocation.

Public agencies are unable to build or expand parks, schools, or fire stations. Businesses are unable to adapt to changing market conditions. Readers may remember the fuss several months ago when Carmel Coin Wash laundromat lost its lease and had to go out of business for lack of a water allocation.

Developers who can afford to build their own water supply and treatment system won't be stopped. Rancho San Carlos is outside the water district and is unaffected by the decision on the dam. Clint Eastwood's Cañada Woods project and several other potential developments in Carmel Valley can proceed without the dam. They established water rights through past agricultural use and can convert these rights to other uses.

Pebble Beach gained water for its development plans by financing the reclamation project. Major developments in Sand City will use small desalination plants if Cal-Am water is unavailable.

Blocking the dam will not stop the big-money development that people are most concerned about.

Modest growth rate

The proposed project will meet state requirements to protect the river environment while increasing Cal-Am's current system capacity limit by 3,381 acre feet (AF) of water. This is the amount available from the project for new construction and remodeling. It represents a 19 percent increase in our water supply to meet the needs of 20 to 30 years of planned growth. That's a growth rate of less than 1 percent per year, a modest rate by any standards.

Lizama added. Although some of the books were "swollen up a size a third bigger than their original...it could have been worse. I think we managed to minimize the extent of the damage."

A Berkeley-based consultant is scheduled to inspect the books on April 11 to recommend steps after freezing.

"Because these books are irreplaceable, it is safe to say we will do whatever it takes to save them," said Patti Saunders, Pine Cone business manager.

An electrical fire began in the composing area of the newsroom at about 2:55 a.m. that Tuesday morning, setting off the sprinklers.

Five-hour shower

Because of a wiring problem in the alarm system, a trouble alarm, rather than a fire alarm, sounded. Patrolling police cleared the building when they closed an open window — blown open on that gusty night — at the First Title Insurance Co.

Because the Carmel Fire Department was in the dark about the incident, the sprinklers ran for five hours, until the first Pine Cone employee arrived shortly before 8 a.m.

While all 80 years of the newspaper are preserved on microfilm at the Harrison Memorial Library, the space-consuming "hard copies" have not been kept, according to Assistant Library Director Lani Fremier.

Therefore, The Pine Cone may have some of the only true original issues.

The library does not have microfilm copies of The Review, The Outlook or The Monarch, published between May 1987 and October 1992. Except for the last 12 months, the PG Public Library has issues of The Monarch on microfische.

Ironically, it was the bound volume for that last year of The Monarch that was damaged in the sprinkler flood.

Carmel's search for new rec director underway

PINE CONE STAFF REPORT

THE CITY of Carmel will be losing its recreation department coordinator, Joslin Soulé, at the end of next week.

Soulé, who marked her one-year anniversary in January, will be getting married in May and relocating to the Bay Area. Her final day on the job is Saturday, April 15.

"We hate to lose Joslin," said Jere Kersnar, Carmel city administrator. "But we knew when we hired her, there might be a chance that she wouldn't be here too long."

Soulé, 24, said she first informed Kersnar back in November of her intentions, but did not give her official notice until February.

"I'm sorry to leave, but I feel comfortable that I'm leaving the department in a good, stable situation," Soulé said. "It was a good experience."

The hunt begins

Kersnar said the city has been advertising the position both locally and statewide. He said the search for Soulé's successor may not be finalized until June or July, which means an interim coordinator would be named.

"We'll scramble with existing staff if we have to," Kersnar said. "But all the programs will be on board."

Soulé noted that the '95 summer activities guide is finished and that the department's fiscal year budget for 1995-96 has been completed.

The salary range for the city's recreation coordinator, Kersnar said, is $2,300 to $2,800 per month, or $27,600 to $33,600 per year.

The project increases our drought reserve to reduce risk of rationing. According to a recent water district analysis, drought protection storage will be 16,000 AF greater than at present even after all growth allowed by the dam has occurred.

Mr. Zorach argues that "powerful lobbies" will eventually take water intended for drought reserve and the environment and use it for growth. He is right to be suspicious. Recognizing these pressures, the water district and state environmental agencies have both adopted measures to protect the water set aside for drought reserve and the environment.

First, the public vote will set 3,381 AF as the amount of water from this project that is available for growth. That amount cannot be increased without another public vote.

Second, water for growth must be made available in five-year increments consistent with growth allowed by the Regional Air Quality Management Plan. Third, state conditions on permit approval specify detailed environmental requirements. Once approved, these permit conditions cannot be changed to make more water available for growth without reopening the long and contentious state legal process that determines water rights in Carmel Valley.

PG's Good Old Days celebration kicks off Friday

By BETH PENNEY

PACIFIC GROVE'S Good Old Days celebration runs April 7-9 this year, featuring a golf tournament, pancake breakfast, parade, quilt show, arts and crafts fair, Victorian fashion show, silent movies, free entertainment, and other events.

The fun gets underway Friday with the Wood Shaft Golf Tournament at the PG Golf Links. Golfers dress in period garb and are allowed to play their rounds using only wood-shafted clubs; no modern clubs or putters are allowed.

Also on Friday, from 7 to 9 p.m., is the preview party for the annual Quilt Show at Chautauqua Hall on 16th Street.

Pancakes before the parade

At 8 a.m. Saturday, the PG Kiwanis serve their annual Pancake Breakfast at Jewell Park, at Central and Grand Avenues. Proceeds from the breakfast benefit PG charities.

The Good Old Days Parade starts at 10 a.m. and runs between Granite and Fountain Avenues on Pine Street. More than 80 entries are expected this year, including marching bands, military color guards, horse-drawn carriages, antique cars and motorized floats. The Police Motorcycle Riding Competition follows the parade at noon on Pine Avenue.

The popular Arts and Crafts Faire along Lighthouse Avenue runs both Saturday and Sunday, featuring more than 200 crafters and food vendors. There is no admission charge for the Faire.

Activities are free

Throughout the day, old-fashioned activities are offered at no charge, and feature such diversity as Professor Gordon's Ragtime Theater, a Victorian fashion show, a pie-eating contest, and a Firefighters Muster and Horse Cart Race, all of which give onlook-

'First Thursday' art, music walk debuts tonight

■ three spirits gallery owner Susan Collins attempts to liven up Pacific Grove night life scene, while providing downtown businesses with more public exposure.

By IVY WESTON

PACIFIC GROVE will hold an art and live music walk entitled "First Thursday" from 6 to 9 tonight throughout downtown Pacific Grove.

Art walk maps may be picked up at an opening Jazz Happy Hour reception from 4:30 to 6:30 p.m. at El Cocodrilo restaurant on Lighthouse Ave.. Ten of PG's 12 art galleries will be open for the event, and several coffee houses and restaurants are presenting live acoustic music.

Bassist Dennis Murphy and friends are providing the musical entertainment for the reception, sponsored by "smooth jazz" radio station KXDC FM. If you miss the reception, maps are available at El Cocodrilo and participating galleries and restaurants throughout the evening.

Susan Collins, owner of three spirits gallery, located on 17th between Lighthouse and Central, came up with the idea for First Thursday after vacationing in Portland, Oregon and in Seattle. On the first Thursday of each month, galleries throughout these cities stay open late.

Hot stuff

Upon her return to Pacific Grove, Collins wondered if First Thursday would work in PG. She decided to start "pounding the pavement" to see if she could drum up enough interest among Pacific Grove gallery owners.

Susan Collins in her gallery.

"When I went around and talked to the owners, I realized there's some pretty hot stuff in those galleries," she said.

Collins hopes PG's first First Thursday will be a success so that the event can become a monthly feature for the town, thus livening the evenings up a bit "Pacific Grove is notorious for rolling up the sidewalks at 5 p.m.," she said.

Participating galleries include the Artists Forum Gallery, Claypoole-Freese Gallery, Enyart Gallery, Hauk Fine Art, Lou Roman Impressions, Pacific Grove Art Center, Raven in the Grove, Sally Russell, three spirits gallery, and the Vehicle Gallery.

Rhubarb: A sign of spring

BEAUTIFUL LACY Buck grows rhubarb. So does Cole Weston down in Carrapata Canyon. There is a big, bushy plant on exhibition in the garden of the Cooper Molera adobe in Monterey and for sure I'm going to grow rhubarb too, just as soon as I get my dream house.

Luscious, exuberant rhubarb is bursting into prominence all over the peninsula. But if you are not growing the real vegetable - yes, vegetable - yourself, look for the springtime pink stalks at your supermarket.

Rhubarb was valued for its purgative properties in the annals of Chinese medicine dating as far back as 2700 B.C. Marco Polo found the ancient plant along the waysides of his famous trek.

It was later imported to Europe from the desert regions of Siberia along the Volga River in the 17th century. Called "pieplant" by American colonists, it was grown not only as an edible but also as an ornamental garden plant.

In spring, the saucy stalks of the rhubarb are to be put to use into many old favorites like rhubarb-strawberry pie. It's a tart delight to the palate when put up as a conserve or baked into bread. Do not use the leaves of the plant under any circumstances, however, as they contain oxalic acid, which is poisonous.

While you should never cut more than a third of the stalks from each plant, you may still end up with more than ample quantities. Luckily, rhubarb can be blanched and frozen for later use. Remember too that as the stems mature over the season they will require increasing amounts of sugar or honey.

Monterey Peninsula resident Deborah Smith's Apron Strings column appears bi-weekly in The Pine Cone.

CHICKEN WITH RHUBARB

4 boneless chicken breasts
4 cups rhubarb
8 large mushrooms, quartered
1 thumb-sized piece of ginger, minced
1 toe of garlic, minced
6 scallions, chopped
1/3 - 1/2 cup sugar or honey
1/2 cup water
2 tablespoons rice vinegar
2 tablespoons olive oil

Cut chicken and rhubarb into two-inch pieces. Saute chicken in oil until lightly brown. Set aside.

In same pan saute scallions, garlic and ginger. Add rhubarb, chicken mushrooms, sugar, water and vinegar. Cover and simmer for 10 minutes.

Serve with rice. Chicken livers rolled in flour may be substituted for chicken.

Serves 4.

RHUBARB BARBECUE SAUCE

2 cups rhubarb cut in two-inch lengths
1/2 cup water
3-4 tablespoons brown sugar
1 tablespoon soy sauce
1 large toe of garlic, minced
1 thumb-sized piece of ginger, chopped
Cayenne pepper to taste

Simmer all ingredients for about 30 minutes. Cool. Slather on pork as barbecue sauce.

RHUBARB CRUMBLE

Mix together:

4 cups rhubarb (about six stalks)
1 cup flour
3/4 cup uncooked oatmeal
1 cup brown sugar or honey
1/2 stick butter, melted
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Heat until thick:

1 cup white sugar
2 tablespoon corn starch
1 cup water
1 teaspoon vanilla

Cut rhubarb into two-inch lengths. Put half the amount of crumble on the bottom of a baking dish. Heap rhubarb on top and pour thickened sauce over all. Top with remaining crumble.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Cool at least 15 minutes. Serve with whipped cream or vanilla ice cream.

Serves 6 to 8.

CHANGES

I went back to the old town
Just to see if things had changed
But the honey suckle still bloomed
At the post office
And the ghost of my little toy dog
Stood faithful and fervent
Waiting for my return
I passed the old house
But it was grey now, not white,
With lichens of moss on the panes
And the sign at the gate
Said House for Sale
I trudged up the hill to see
If there was room at the Inn
But the young ones missed the merriment
And there in the gloom
of the empty room, they whispered,
"Where have they gone?
Why did they go?"
But the old ones know,
And the answer was always the same
Unforgiven, unforgotten . .
I took the winding road
That led to the Ranch
And the sheep grazed in the meadow
Peaceful in the noon day sun
It was there I came upon
A tall, thin chap
With cold, cold eyes
"Isn't it nice," I said
"There's nothing changed,
It's just the way it was,
Long, long ago."
"Yes ma'am," he answered
And a secret smile
Flickered over those cold, cold eyes
"Maybe the world doesn't allow you
To keep things the same,
But we can try."

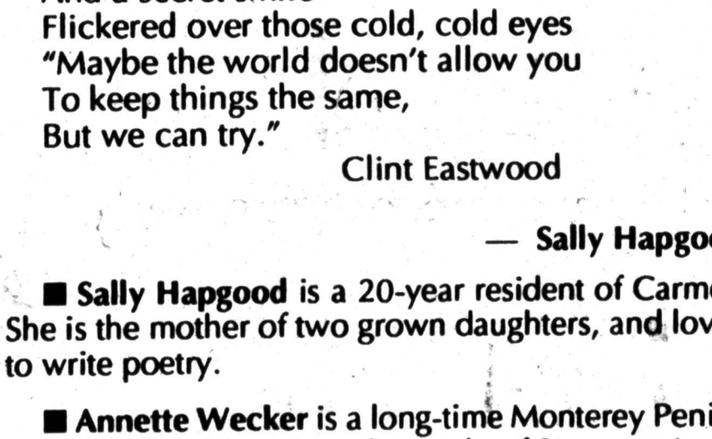
PERFORMANCE CARMEL

Presents

URBAN BUSH WOMEN



A dance ensemble with repertoire rooted in the folklore and spiritual traditions of Africans throughout the diaspora, Urban Bush Women incorporate traditional rhythms & rituals with contemporary music, dance & drama. Finding humanity in the movement of their bodies, the songs of their history and the stories of their lives, they combine women's bodies, racist myths, sexist stereotypes, and the "science" of hip-hop to create a startlingly original, thrilling, and exhilarating piece of theatre.

Kuumbwa Jazz Center in Santa Cruz. So tomorrow night's double bill — Pacific Grove resident Randl plus tasteful pianist Martan Mann — forms the big draw over there.

Mary Anne and Martan returned not long ago from a European tour. She'd be at home in the cabaret or blues room. Both will be presenting new albums.

Fine flutist Kenny Stahl, Bob Blankenship (drums) and Michael Marcus (bass) complete the cast. It's $5 per at the door only.

Upcoming: Orquesta Gitano Salsa Dance Concert (April 14), tenorman Johnny Griffin (April 17).

■ Ready for major partytime? Carnaval Santa Cruz '95 occurs from 7 Saturday evening until midnight at the city auditorium. Here we have the annual benefit for Kuumbwa and Tandy Beal Dancers.

Pete Escovedo Orchestra, Banda Constelcao from Brazil, Escola Dida de Santa Cruz, Fusao Brazilian Dance Company, costume ball and contest, exotic food and drink. You pay $16 on show day or $14 advance (429-3444).

■ The Urban Bush Women dance ensemble performs beginning at 8 tomorrow night in Sunset Center. Thus the Performance Carmel series rolls on in fascinating form.

This troupe's colorful pieces celebrate African American song and spiritual resilience via contemporary idioms and live music onstage. The rough beauty of field hollers (the bedrock under blues and jazz) won't leave your memory.

Tickets cost $15 and $12.50. Call 624-3996.

■ Those KAZU Radio Blues Nights have switched to Wednesdays at Doc Ricketts' Lab. Upcoming: Texas singer Katy Moffatt (Wednesday), C.J. Chenier from the Zydeco realm (April 19), killer blues harmonica man William Clarke (April 26).

Stone truth — Clarke turns heads everywhere he plays. Call 649-4241.

■ The much-praised French guitarist Pierre Bensusan plays Pacific Grove Art Center at 8 p.m. Saturday. It's $12 (advance) or $14 (at the door).

■ Some worthwhile live music will be part of PG Good Old Days this weekend.

You'll find Professor Gordon's Ragtime Theater in Robert Down School Auditorium. Shows at 1 and 4 p.m. on both Saturday and Sunday.

The pianist will render classic rags as silent film comedies fill the screen. It's $3 adults and $1 children under 12 with proceeds aiding PG school music programs.

From 1:30 until 2:30 p.m. Saturday, the Yazoo Blues Revue will romp in the Bank of America parking lot downtown. Freebie.

■ Chicago blues giant Buddy Guy plays The Catalyst in Santa Cruz tomorrow night. Call 423-1336.

Goodbye, good man

Jazz people who pray said silent words for Carl Jefferson. Founder of the Concord Festival and Concord Jazz record label, Carl died on March 29 in St. Helena Hospital. Cancer took him at age 75.

He started the major jazz fest (1969) while still running his lucrative auto dealership. The recording operation kicked off in 1972 when two pals — guitarists Joe Pass and Herb Ellis — asked Carl to tape their Concord set live.

Today the Concord catalogue contains more than 600 titles — from Ray Brown and Gene Harris to George Shearing with Mel Torme, Rosemary Clooney, Scott Hamilton, Marian McPartland, Tania Maria and former Carmel Valley flutist Ali Ryerson.

Carl's last recording project also was a guitar duo — Howard Alden and Jimmy Bruno — logged a few months ago in New York. (He sold the label to Alliance Entertainment, but was scheduled to run things for two more years.)

His affection for the late guitarist Emily Remler expressed itself through the care taken with her memorial albums. Now Carl and Emily can trade winks in heaven.

Daylight Savings Time not very friendly to 'Night People'

HUMOROUS COMMENTARY

By PATRICK WHITEHURST

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN came up with the idea of Daylight Saving Time back in 1784. Old Ben had a lot of good ideas, but I don't think this is one of his better ones . . .

We're about a week into this thing now . . . Daylight Saving Time . . . and I'm not sure I like it. Let me be more positive: I hate it! Bear with me for one moment, for I am certain millions of people out there could identify with my sensitive inner-most feelings.

First of all, I don't understand Daylight Saving Time. No matter what you do to the clock there is just so much daylight, and God alone controls that. Personally I like more dark at night and less in the morning. I'm the kind of person that stumbles around in the morning trying to remember where I left the kitchen.

'Day people' won

There are "day people" and there are "night people" and we are, unfortunately, forced to share this planet. I can't remember anybody ever asking me how I felt about losing that last precious hour of sleep, and I'm upset that the "day people" seem to have won.

When I'm through with the day I want it to be dark. I want my shower, my drink, my dinner, and then I want it to be dark. I have no burning desire to play in the garden, or wash the car, and I'm not going anyplace after the sun goes down that my headlights can't handle.

I like the cozy quilt of darkness that ends my day. I like to set the fire, pick up a book and settle into the comfort of evening without the sun intruding on my quiet time. If it's still light outside I feel guilty not "doing" something.

If I was a farmer I'd never set my clocks ahead, and all my cows would love me. Think about it. All those cows have their inner clocks ticking away and suddenly someone's tugging on an udder or sticking milking machine equipment on several of their very private parts an hour earlier than they are accustomed to. Maybe it doesn't work that way down on the farm in real life. Maybe the farmer sticks to Standard Time for the cows, and adjusts the rest of his life to Daylight Saving Time. Poor farmer, his life must be a mess.

But I follow the rules, not because I want to, but because the bank, the hardware store, and my Darlin' seem to embrace this unnatural time-warp. So I set my watch and my clocks ahead, lose an hour of sleep, and am confused when I oversleep the following dark morning.

The "day people" love Daylight Saving Time. All year long they're up before us anyway. They are out there chopping wood, painting fences in the dark, going to the Safeway at 5:30 in the morning, and checking the bank balance three hours before the bank opens, and they're excited because it's dark and they're doing stuff.

It makes them feel superior to us "night guys." They're up and going long before the sun rubs its eyes and splatters mauve paint in the east. The sun is reluctant to impose on us "night guys," but those "morning guys" can hardly wait to say, "Coffee's ready . . . Sleepy-head!"

But next fall I get my revenge when all the clocks jump back to where they belong, and all the cows have an extra hour of privacy, and the cock crows at the proper time, and I roll over in my down comforter and say, "Thank you Lord, we're back on time."

ers and residents alike a taste of PG's heritage.

Also scheduled are bluegrass bands, arm wrestling, photographic exhibits, school chorus performances, readings from Dickens novels and a Victorian Music Hall Sing-Along presented by the Dickens Fellowship.

Modern additions to the festivities include police drill team exhibitions, a POGs tournament, bubble gum-blowing contests, and an in-line skating show.

Town steeped in history

This year marks the 39th Good Old Days celebration and Pacific Grove's 106th year of incorporation. Founded in 1889 by the Methodist-Episcopal Church as a summer retreat, P.G is widely known for its community-wide celebrations.

These celebrations began with the Chautauqua activities in the early 1900s, which were the forerunners of the town's 90-year-old Feast of Lanterns; the Butterfly Parade each October; and the Good Old Days, sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, each spring.

three spirits opens show with reception tonight

AN ARTIST'S reception for Dante Rondo and Nell Flattery will be held from 6 to 9 tonight at three spirits gallery, located on 17th Street between Lighthouse and Central in Pacific Grove.

Rondo's impressionistic works inspired by Bali, Hawaii, French Polynesia, Big Sur and Carmel, are done in the media of oils, acrylics, watercolors, pastels, graphite and relief print-making. MPMA opens two new exhibitions

■ Early California Tonalism and Hank Ketcham's artistic career are featured.

"CALIFORNIA PAINTING 1900-1940: Tonalist, Impressionist and Plain-Air" is the title of a new exhibit on display through September 3 at the Monterey Peninsula Museum of Art.

The exhibit draws from the museum's collection of California paintings to briefly survey the three styles most important in the state between 1900 and 1940.

There is also a new show at MPMA's branch in the La Mirada adobe at 720 Via Mirada in Monterey: "From Menace to Matisse: The New Art of Hank Ketcham."

The exhibition, which follows Ketcham's transition from cartoonist to oil and watercolor artist, opens with a reception from 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. Friday at La Mirada.

The show is divided into two parts: the upper level of the Dart Wing showcases Ketcham's cartoon illustrations and rough sketches from the 1940s through the early 1990s, while the lower level displays his recent watercolors and oils on such subjects as jazz, golf and the Central Coast landscape.

A version of the exhibition premiered at Boston University in November 1994. The exhibit will be on view at MPMA through May 28. More information about either show: 372-5477.

Who benefits the most from latest technology?

California Trends

By BRADLEY INMAN

AT A REAL estate trade show last fall in Anaheim, Calif., a software vendor was showing off a mortgage program that analyzes hundreds of complex home loans.

Naturally, the program could find the best interest rate or loan terms for the consumer. But the software was also set up so its first function was to search for the most lucrative commission for the mortgage broker.

Technology innovations — new software, online services and data bases — promise to make the real estate transactions more efficient and, therefore, less costly.

But computers aren't always designed to aid the public, and in the short term, many of the benefits of electronic efficiency will not be passed on to home buyers and sellers.

Latest thing

For example, the latest craze among real estate agents is comparative market analysis (CMA) software programs, which analyze home prices and spit out detailed information for predicting a home's value.

The programs rely on the multiple listing service (MLS), which includes most homes that are on the market and the prices of houses that have already sold.

Along with insight into what a home is worth, the data gives the real estate broker comprehensive information on which agents make the most sales and what types of housing — condos, single-family or investment property — they specialize in.

Even though this information could be invaluable to home buyers and sellers looking to find the most productive real estate agents, brokers are reluctant to pass it on to the public.

In the short term, technology is not expected to bring lower fees and reduced commissions. The public may even pay more to capitalize the costs of technology as agents, lenders and mortgage brokers make massive investments in hardware and software.

While many firms will reduce their payrolls, these savings will be offset by their equipment purchases and computer training.

"There wasn't even a line item for (technology) five years ago, so the amount of money that is being spent on computer equipment is mind-boggling for the average realtor," said Gill Woods, President, National Association of Realtors, Chicago.

He predicts that technology will save home buyers and sellers more time than money.

Consumers who use the latest technology themselves and who are determined to circumvent the real estate industry will also pay for the privilege.

Currently, the public can get listings for free from real estate agents who own and control the MLS. While this traditional system puts the agent in complete control, there are no direct costs to the consumers for spoon-fed home listings.

Alternatively, the public can find a limited number of listings on computer services such as Prodigy and America On Line,. But users must pay for their own computer hardware and for access charges to on-line services.

Over the long term, the prospects of consumer savings are more promising. For example, once

Others benefit more than consumer from latest technology

most home listings are available to the public through computer networks and the real estate agents no longer have a bear hug around them, their services will not be worth the standard 6 percent.

"It costs you 10 percent to turn over your home because of an inefficient delivery system," said Peter Palmisano, a member of the board of directors of First Mortgage Network, Walnut Creek, a new on-line mortgage bank that relies on technology to streamline underwriting and loan processing.

"Think how many times you have to write down your social security number in a transaction — that usually means another person is handling a piece of paper, which costs you money."

> Think how many times you have to write down your social security number in a transaction — that usually means another person is handling a piece of paper, which costs you money.

Mortgage origination is in for some of the most profound changes. "Loan applications that used to take five days will take 15 minutes," said Woods.

The transformation began more than 10 years ago and had nothing to do with technology.

When Wall Street securitized mortgages and began selling them like stocks, it created more competition and put pressure on banks, thrifts and mortgage bankers to make and service loans more efficiently.

Just as technology streamlined the trading of stocks and bonds, it is revolutionizing how mortgages are made.

But it also means the home loan industry needs fewer workers to process the paperwork as transactions are handled on high-speed networks.

Plus, the value of mortgage brokers diminishes as computers search for the best loan at a fraction of the cost charged by traditional brokers.

During this technological transition, consumers should demand more complete information and ask more questions than ever. Consider the following:

- Show me exactly why this is the best loan rate by giving me a graphic comparison with others.
- What are your specific charges for finding this mortgage for me?
- Give me a list of the most productive brokers from your CMA program?
- Show me a computer-generated market analysis.

Technology can be an industry advantage, a powerful consumer tool, or both.

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of RALPH ALEXANDER SORY, aka RALPH A. SORY, aka RALPH SORY.

A PETITION has been filed by Vivian R. Pray in the Superior Court of California, County of MONTEREY.

THE PETITION requests that VIVIAN R. PRAY be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decendent.

THE PETITION requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided in section 9100 of the California Probate Code. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a formal Request for Special Notice of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in section 1250 of the California Probate Code. A Request for Special Notice form is available from the court clerk.
